Country Information [edit | edit source]

Germany is a vibrant country with a rich history and heritage. As with many countries of Europe, Germany has seen dramatic changes to its borders and even its internal regions. Over the centuries, Germany consisted of numerous independent kingdoms, duchies, principalities, and states. Then in 1871, all German-speaking states except the Austrian states were consolidated into the German Empire. [1]

Czechia ➔ Archives and Libraries

Archives collect and preserve original documents of organizations, such as churches or governments. Libraries generally collect published sources such as books, maps, and microfilm. This section describes the major repositories of genealogical and historical records and sources for the Czech Republic. When one of these institutions is referred to elsewhere in this outline, return to this section to obtain the address.

If you plan to visit one of these repositories, contact the organization and ask for information about their hours, services, and fees. When writing to an archive in the Czech Republic, you may write in English.

In the Czech Republic there are several types of genealogical repositories:

- National archives and libraries
- Regional archives
- Military archives
- Church parish offices
- University and public libraries
- Historical and genealogical
- Societies

Most of the Czech Republic records are now available online. Click here for the archive map showing their jurisdiction boundaries and the links to the online databases.

Church records from the Litoměřice Regional Archive are now available for indexing on the FamilySearch website. Click here to start indexing.

Regional Archives [edit | edit source]

Czech vital records are kept at the regional archives and most are available online. There are seven regional archives. Former Bohemian Region is served by five regional archives in Litoměřice, Plzeň, Praha, Třeboň, and Zámrsk. Former Moravian Region is served by two regional archives in Opava and Brno. The seven regional archives are the repositories for most pre-1900 parish books and, therefore, are the archives of primary importance to Czech genealogical researchers. In addition to early parish books, the regional archives house an enormous amount of important material including early cadastral records, maps, architectural plans, historical documents, court records, administrative papers, etc. The archives maintain extensive catalogs of their holdings but, so far, these catalogs are not available online. The regional archives of the Czech Republic are open to the public.

You must know the village, city or parish to determine which archive holds the records of your ancestors. Use the GenTeam Free Gazetteer to find out which archive holds the records that you need. GenTeam Instructions

If you do not know the name of the village or parish your ancestors lived in, see Tracing Immigrant Origins and Czech Republic Emigration and Immigration.

District Archives [edit | edit source]

Since most ancestry research is done at the regional archives rather than the district archives, the inventories of the district archives are far from well known. For example, censuses before 1930 (1869, 1880, 1890, 1900, 1910, 1921) are housed at the district archives.

Writing for Civil Registration and Church Records [edit | edit source]

If you need civil registration records, you will usually need to write for them, because they are recent enough to fall within privacy restrictions. You might also need church records which are not yet online because of privacy. Records too private to be posted online yet are still available to close family members for genealogical purposes. Instructions for writing are found in the article Czech eBadatelna

The web application of the State Regional Archives in Prague (SRA Prague) eBadatelna is designed to be used for remote access to digitized registers of the Central Bohemia Region.

It also serves as an inventory of all registers of births, marriages and deaths that are kept by SRA Prague, regardless of whether they are already digitalized or not yet. If you can´t find the register you need, it means it´s not kept by SRA Prague. Not digitized books can be studied in person free of charge in the study room of SRA Prague.

Registers of the City of Prague and other regions, as well as Jewish registers and military registers are kept by other archives.

Under the Records Act, the archives store registers after 100 years from the last entry in a register of births and after 75 years from the last entry in a register of marriages/deaths. More recent registers are kept by relevant record offices. If there is an earlier transfer of a register into the archives, e.g. because of poor physical condition, the remote access is not permitted for unexpired records. In accordance with current legislation, this restriction does not apply to death records.

Summary

① Historical Records – browse all collections or browse by location to find records. Excellent way to find names that are mix-indexed or misspelled.

② Catalog – many records can be found here that may not be indexed on the historical record part of the website

③ Images – all of FamilySearch's microfilms are now digitized. Search by location and narrow down by filters.

④ Wiki – great way to find online collections for other websites and repositories. It has many tools to help you be successful.
